

THE WRITING CENTER

Liberal Arts Building 5330

Phone: 410-704-3426

Director: Wayne Robertson

The Graduate Writing Center is a service designed specifically for the needs of graduate writers at Towson University. Writing Center consultants work with graduate writers at any stage of the writing process from brainstorming to polishing the final draft. They provide feedback to help writers develop and organize their thoughts, sharpen their focus, and communicate their ideas more clearly and precisely. Graduate writers can bring in any type of writing project, including essays, research papers, lab reports, PowerPoint presentations, resumes, and creative writing. In addition, they can make ongoing appointments to work on longer projects such as theses and dissertations.

In addition to face-to-face tutoring, the Writing Center provides a robust online tutoring platform (WCOonline) where students can schedule appointments and meet with writing consultants. This platform offers screen-to-screen ZOOM conversations, while also letting students make revisions to their documents in real time. More information about the Writing Center's online services can be found on the Writing Center's virtual tutoring page.

The Writing Center is dedicated to creating an inclusive and accessible learning environment. Please contact Wayne Robertson if you require any accommodations or have suggestions about how the Writing Center can better meet your needs.