What Honors Students Experience

- Good Standing in the Honors College (http://catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/honors-college/good-standing-honors-college)
- Honors Recognition (http://catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/honors-college/honors-recognition)
- Honors College Leadership Council (http://catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/honors-college/honors-college-leadership-council)
- Scholarships (http://catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/honors-college/scholarships)

The Honors College (https://www.towson.edu/honors) at Towson University is designed to provide unique and challenging opportunities for the most highly qualified and motivated students seeking intellectual and personal growth. The Honors College involves students and faculty from across TU in a community of scholars who together explore questions within and beyond their disciplines. The Honors College serves, therefore, as the center and symbol of TU's commitment to academic excellence in the education of its undergraduates. The “Living and Learning Community” was specifically designed to create an intellectual community where students live together on campus and share ideas, integrate residential living with classroom activity and nurture an environment conducive to academic achievement.

Approximately 800 students from all degree granting colleges and major departments participate in the Honors College. Professors from a variety of disciplines are selected to lead small Honors College classes that encourage interdisciplinarity, multiple pedagogies, student involvement, creativity, open discussion and independent critical thinking. In this way, students’ perspectives are expanded as they explore areas not closely related to their disciplines and are encouraged to work in their majors with greater intensity than would be possible within traditional curricular programs. Thus, the Honors College provides an environment in which students develop their skills, cultivate their talents, and achieve excellence in academics, research, service and individual development, leading to professional success and personal fulfillment.

New freshman and transfer students must complete an Honors College application to be considered for admission to the Honors College. Most honors students apply in high school and are admitted for their freshman year, but transfer and current Towson University students may also apply to the Honors College. High school and transfer applicants with fewer than 30 credits are evaluated based on their high school academic record; SAT scores; participation in leadership, extracurricular and community service activities; and a well-written application essay.

Transfer students with 30 credits or more of graded, college-level courses must have at least a 3.50 GPA to apply and will be evaluated on the basis of their collegiate record instead of their high school grades and SATs. Applicants from other honors programs will be given special consideration for admission.

Current Towson University students may apply to the Honors College if they have been enrolled at Towson University for no more than four terms (60 units) and have a cumulative GPA of 3.50 or higher.

The Honors College curriculum comprises four distinct categories — Foundations, Lower-Level Honors Coursework, Upper-Level Honors Seminars, and Experiential and Advanced Learning.

Students that joined the Honors College prior to fall 2016 should refer to the Honors College website (https://www.towson.edu/honors/academics/curriculum.html) or the undergraduate catalog for the year in which they were admitted to the Honors College for the specifics of their curriculum. If you have any questions regarding which curriculum you should fulfill, please contact your Honors advisor.

Students who have credit for ENGL 102 in any form (AP credit, course taken at TU, course taken elsewhere and transferred to TU) cannot take ENGL 190 for credit. Therefore they must take ENGL 290 to fulfill this requirement.

Lower-Level Honors Courses
Select two from the following:

Honors versions of 100-200-level courses (e.g. PSYC 102)
Due to the character limit, the full text is not provided here. However, the document discusses the Honors College requirements for transfer students, including the total program requirement being 21 units. It outlines different types of courses such as Honors English, Experiential Learning Courses, and Honors Seminar Courses. The document also provides a Sample Four-Year Schedule for incoming transfer students and defines Honors Courses.
catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/core-curriculum-requirements) list for updated information. Seminars at the 300 level are intended for juniors and seniors, though advanced second-term sophomores may also enroll. Seminars at the 300 level may also be used to fulfill Honors Elective credit (see below).

200 level
Lower-level Honors College seminars allow for in-depth study of fundamental issues, ideas, topics or problems. These interdisciplinary seminars are on a wide range of original topics that are based on the instructors’ areas of interest. Emphasis for these seminars is on developing and strengthening skills important to success in honors and undergraduate education, including oral and written communication skills, reading skills, critical and creative thinking, etc. These seminars may be repeated for credit if topics change. Courses include 200-level seminars with the HONR code, PHIL 212, POSC 212 and ENGL 290 (which can only be taken twice with different topics, whether for seminar credit, Honors English credit, or some combination thereof). These seminars may be repeated for a maximum of 6 units of credit toward Honors College requirements if topics change.

300/400 level
Upper-level Honors courses are designed to deepen knowledge about a particular intellectual issue and demonstrate the interconnectedness of academic disciplines. The approach is interdisciplinary, but some specific discipline content is used to further greater understanding of a broader issue. Many of these seminars incorporate problem-solving components and independent writing or research projects as part of a culminating activity. Like the lower-level seminars, these courses have original topics that are based on the instructor’s area of interest. These seminars may satisfy major or minor requirements. Consult your major or minor adviser for more information. These seminars may satisfy major or minor requirements, such as major, minor or Core requirements. Courses include 300-level seminars with the HONR code (may be repeated several times with a different topic), KNES 354 and ENGL 332.

Honors Elective Credit
Students must complete 6 units of Honors Electives. Eligible course options, whether taken under department codes or the HONR code include:

- Independent Study
- Study Abroad
- Internships
- Service-learning
- Directed Readings
- Thesis
- 300-level HONR seminars

For all of these options except 300-level seminars, students must follow Honors College guidelines, submit required paperwork before starting these courses, and get the approval of the Honors College Faculty Director by the end of the first week of classes for the term in which the course is taken. A maximum of 3 units toward Honors College requirements may be given for each learning experience in a single term. A maximum of 6 units total of Electives may be used toward Honors College requirements. More information and syllabus templates for Honors Independent Study, Internships, Service-learning, Directed Readings, and Thesis are available on the Honors College website.

The Honors College strongly encourages these experiential learning options, and students should contact the Faculty Director for the term before beginning these experiential learning courses to discuss options and ensure they are eligible for Honors College credit.

Students interested in Study Abroad must submit the forms for Study Abroad available on the Honors College website and contact the Faculty Director prior to their departure. Participants in short-term Study Abroad courses may receive 3 units toward their Honors Electives if they complete an approved study abroad project and a public presentation. Honors College students participating in full-term (Fall or Spring) study abroad course work may receive 6 units toward their Honors Electives if they complete an approved study abroad project and public presentation.

Credit for Honors Electives, with the exception of 300-level seminars, is not automatic. Experiential learning courses which are taken under a department code and are approved by the Honors College Faculty Director may also count for credit in the student’s major or minor with the approval of that department. See the Course Descriptions (http://catalog.towson.edu/undergraduate/course-descriptions) listing of specific courses for more information. All experiential learning courses require a significant writing component and a public presentation which must be completed before Honors College credit can be granted. Contact the Faculty Director for scheduled Honors College presentation dates, which vary each term.

Students interested in Honors Electives, which do not include 300-level seminars, should consult the Honors College website for more detailed, updated information on and deadlines for setting up this type of course work for Honors College credit.
